BRISTOW, July 4.—Use of chemicals to lay the dust on Eleventh avenue almost caused a riot when late neighbors of the chemical user notified the water superintendent that the water conservation ordinance recently passed by the city council on account of a serious water shortage here, had been violated.

The chemical sprinkled over the street has an affinity for the moisture in the air and precipitates it, thereby being as effective as a soaking rain for laying the dust, according to C. O. Beaver, who purchased the chemical to provide for his own comfort.

It worked so well that the neighbors, who were hot and dry, grew hotter on the theory that the water law had been violated.

"Not a drop," said C. O. Beaver to the city water commissioner, who nearly drove the wheels off his Ford to arrive at the scene. "The law still is supreme on Eleventh avenue."

City Water Commissioner Maikom Morrison is still busy explaining how the chemical works when the phone rings, which is at frequent intervals.

Organization of the collection department of the Bristow Retail Merchants association so that it operates not only in every city in Creek county but in practically every city in the state has been completed.

In every city where there is a merchants organization the local merchants have a representative, who is ready and willing to co-operate with them in credit and collection matters.

H. A. Hutchinson is manager of the collection department of the local retailers. Every step in the collection of accounts can be handled by the office without outside legal aid until a case comes up in court.

Farmers May Win Cattle.
Bristow chapter of the Order of DeMolay was organized here. There are 25 boys who are members of the new organization. Members of the Sapulpa chapter of the order put on the degree work.

Farmers day at the Creek County fair next fall at which several head of fine cattle are to be given away to farmers of the county is a trade stunt that will be put on by the members of the Bristow Retail Merchants association.

Each farmer attending will be required to register at Retail Merchants headquarters on the grounds and will be given a chance on each of the cattle.

BEGGS, July 4.—"I haven't enough nerve to be a hijacker. This is my first time and if I ever get out of this I'll never take part in another," said young George Meeker, who was taken from jail by a group of masked men and threatened with hanging if he did not tell them about the hijackers' gang which has been terrorizing this place.

The officers were handcuffed to trees, while young Meeker is said to have been lifted from the ground by a rope that had been thrown over a limb of a tree in a lonely spot near this city. The officers could not help hearing whatever confession Meeker made. He was returned to jail in about an hour after he had been taken away.

Two days afterward a squad of officers surrounded the Rhodes home northwest of this place and captured two men named Buck Colmanworth and Bigger Red, suspected of being implicated with Meeker in holding up Newton Crawford and E. G. Kelly.

Wily Negro and Wife Escape in Spite of Posse

By The Associated Press Staff Writer.
MUSKOGEE, July 4.—The hunt for John Welch and his wife, negroes, who killed Homer Toaff, a deputy sheriff, a week ago today on Brushy Mountain, lagged today following yesterday afternoon's sensational report in the hunt which led close to this city.

Officers today admitted that they are puzzled over the manner in which Welch and his wife have eluded hundreds of searchers and bloodhounds. Although they entertained hope that the pair would still be captured, opinion prevailed that the fugitive had slipped through the cordon at night and were now safely out of this country.
